Below we will list some of the top buying factors that should be considered in order to make an informed buying decision. Buyers that have never come across ketoconazole shampoos in the past will find this section useful. Even if you're an experienced user of such shampoos it's worth taking the time to learn more. You might learn something new that will help you choose a shampoo that better matches your requirements.

Additionally, we will examine the type of buyers that can benefit from a ketoconazole shampoo. There are plenty of people suffering with hair loss that have never come across such a shampoo product range before – so it's worth reading to understand the intended buyers.

Buying considerations to consider

The ingredients list

When it comes to the shampoo the most important buying consideration that you should make is the quality of the ingredients list. All the products on our list contain this ingredient since this buying guide is about ketoconazole.

The majority of ketoconazole shampoos contain this ingredient at a 2% density, which is enough to get the job for hair loss prevention done. This ingredient has the potential to reduce the number of anagen follicles, and this improves the hair density and size. Additionally, there is a scalp infection called pityriasis that can be prevented by ketoconazole. This is an added benefit of this ingredient that's worth taking into consideration.

You should also pay attention to other hair loss ingredients like caffeine, biotin, and saw palmetto:

- Caffeine: this is a drug that's known for that "pick me up" feeling in the morning. However, it also helps counteract that role that testosterone plays in reducing hair follicles. It's been shown that caffeine increases hair shaft length, prolongs anagen duration, and stimulates the growth of keratinocyte.
- Biotin: also known as Vitamin B7, biotin deficiencies can lead to hair loss. It plays a vital role in skin cell health, and also the health of hair follicles. Retaining hair is more difficult when the follicles are weak.
- Saw palmetto: saw palmetto plays a role in blocking an enzyme that contributes to the conversion of DHT from testosterone.

However, just because an ingredient is included in a list doesn't mean it will be effective. That's because at times the manufacturer decided to limit the density of the active ingredient to very small levels. Therefore, take into account the amount of an ingredient in a formula before putting your faith in the shampoo.

Volume

The volume of the shampoo is something else that you should consider when making a purchase. If you're interested in buying the best ketoconazole shampoos for the first time, then buy a small bottle size. This enables you to try out a shampoo at a lower cost before investing in a bigger bottle.

However, keep in mind that bigger bottle sizes cost more, but typically represent a better deal. You'll pay less per ounce when you are buying a bigger bottle size. Some manufacturers do not give you a choice when it comes to different bottles sizes. In that case, you're stuck with what's on offer.

Dermatologically tested and research

There are a number of shampoos that have been dermatologically tested to ensure that all the ingredients are safe. This is an important point to consider because some products have sulphates and other unwanted ingredients that can produce unwanted side-effects.

Furthermore, it helps if the ingredients of the shampoo have a lot of research behind them that indicate their effectiveness. Before buying shampoo from this list you're encouraged to do some background research on it. Perhaps there are some studies that have been completed with a decent sample size. This type of information is worth paying attention to as opposed to the marketing on the bottle.

Added benefits

A hair loss shampoo that includes ketoconazole can provide a number of other benefits that add value to the purchase. Here are some of the top ones you should consider:
