Product description

Appearance: Clear to Hazy Liquid Suggested Use Levels: 2.0 - 4.0% Leucidal Liquid SF is a probiotic-based preservative ingredient created by the fermentation of Lactobacillus. Lactobacillus is one of the species of microorganisms used to produce fermented products such as sauerkraut and kimchi, a Korean dietary staple, from cabbage. Like many members of the lactic acid bacteria family, Lactobacillus is capable of restricting the growth of other microorganisms by acidifying its environment and producing novel antimicrobial peptides These peptides, known as bacteriocins, are capable of providing broad spectrum antimicrobial protection. LeucidalLiquid SF is approved by ECOCERT and may be used in certified organic cosmetics. THIS IS NOT A FINISHED PRODUCT AND IS NOT MEANT TO BE USED DIRECTLY ON THE SKIN! If you are unfamiliar with how to use this item, please call RESURRECTIONbeauty for assistance! A preservative is NOT a substitute for proper sanitation procedures necessary for clean and safe cosmetic production. Leucidal is a registered trademark of Active Micro Technologies, LLC.

Do NOT, I repeat, do NOT trust this as a preservative!

Reviewed in the United States on December 24, 2018

As a professional formulator of natural skin care products, I decided to try this myself in a couple of my products. Within days of mixing my formulas and allowing them to sit for 10 days (and not necessarily being open and used mind you), my water based formulas smelled "yeasty". I didn't have an official micro-challenge performed, but I can assure you that this product is not a legitimate skin care preservative! In fact, if a novice formulator relied on this as a preservative system for a water based formula (and given the right conditions), they are risking their health. For instance, eye contact with an inadequately preserved water soluble product could wind up causing a really nasty eye infection. I use other natural preservative systems which work very well and pass the standardized microbial challenge testing. And btw, GOOGLE "leucidal" and see what you find....

Really great leucidal liquid (natural preserver) for my DIY skincare

Reviewed in the United States on December 12, 2016

Verified Purchase

I've been using Leucidal Liquid as a non-chemical preserver/anti-microbial in my DIY skincare products for years, and I must say this is my favorite one so far!

You get a fairly decent size (30mL) for the price, and the amber vial bottle with dropper makes it SO easy to add precise amounts to my formulations (compared to a regular vial or squirt tube). I also give kudos to any beauty company that packages their products in amber glass vials (keep that sunlight out!)

I used this preservative for my homemade shampoo and conditioner. I made them a month ago and they are still great! Normally they start looking/smelling off after about a week. I didn't have any reaction with this added to it like I usually do with preservatives

Great natural preservative!

Reviewed in the United States on August 11, 2017

Have used other preservatives in my skin care concoctions and was happy to find this natural alternative. It has a very slight vegetal scent (reminds me of the asian radish, daikon) but it's not offensive and it quickly dissipates before my serum or lotion is absorbed. Also, very happy with customer service as well as the free diy recipes! Look forward to trying their ready-made customizable bases for those times when I'm too busy to whip up something from scratch.

No difference in shelf life using this vs not using it

Reviewed in the United States on August 8, 2019

I bought this to use in homemade facial moisturizer following one of the most popular recipes. I sterilized all my tools and containers with rubbing alcohol first and followed the recipe exactly, including the addition of this product. Keeping the moisturizer in my fridge, it only lasted for about 3 days before the texture changed, and in using it after the texture changed, it caused skin irritation and breakouts overnight - I realized it had gone bad, and threw the rest out. Later, I repeated the recipe, but without using this product. Exact same results, lasted about 3 days before going bad and this time I knew to throw it out after the texture changed. Have tried using this and not using it a few more times, no difference in shelf life. I no longer attempt to make homemade skincare in anything but the very smallest batches that can be used up in a few days, shame. This doesn't make homemaade products last any longer than they would otherwise.

Great product for make at home projects!

Reviewed in the United States on December 1, 2017

Purchased this product to make after sun face spray following the ingredients from Herbivore. I mixed the product as recommended, after combining with the other ingredients, the mixture was cloudy at first, but then went clear after about 20 min. I am very happy with how my spray turned out, and so far have had no problems with it. Will definitely purchase more of this product and possibly others from this seller.

For DIY cosmetics and skincare

Reviewed in the United States on December 30, 2020

I use this in DIY skincare to prevent bacterial growth and contamination, and to extend the life of products. It works! A little goes a long way. Antimicrobial ingredients are a must if you're into DIY skincare. I've never had an issue with sensitivity or allergy to this ingredient, but your mileage may vary! Test everything with a patch skin test prior to use!
