My wife is hypothyroid, and I became interested in her condition when her searched hypothyroidism on the web, and one of the things that popped up on Amazon, and decided to order this. My wife agreed to try it, and I figured I

We decided to take 5 drops (12.5 mg) each day and see if we noticed any much more energy and alertness immediately after starting. But the real surprise was many years that my dermatologist prescribed medication for, but could not cure. My thick and callused skin on one of my palms started showing improvement,

It's been three weeks now, and the eczema patch on my knee, which had been there from a maroon color to a normal skin color, and is still shrinking each day.

I'm dumbfounded! How could my doctors overlook something as simple as this? I've spent considerable money over the years trying to control it since I was told that there was no medicine for something like this to occur.

Update 9-23-09: It's been over two months since I started taking this. The symptoms described in my review are still present. I am VERY happy.
